Branding the Highlands a daunting task

ERIK MARTENSSON

Staff Reporter

As you all well know, it can be tough explaining to your out-of-town friends what the best things about the Haliburton Highlands are. Imagine then how hard it would be to create a "brand image" to sell the county across Canada and around the world which represents all those attributes.

That's the task for Ken Caplan of Kenneth Caplan and Associates Ltd.

Caplan was at a public forum at the PineStone on Thursday to gather input from Highlanders on what they think the region's image should portray.

He convinced the crowd to express themselves and their aspirations for the future of the county, and describe what they think Haliburton represents and has to offer.

The crowd was quick to open up to Caplan with many heart-on-the-sleeve speeches echoing the splendour of the Highlands.

Themes that rotated around the room included the natural beauty of the outdoors, a thriving artistic community, a small town feel and a slower lifestyle.

Long-time and recent residents alike expressed how Haliburton feels "like coming home" to a place where you make time for those things that are important. It is an "oasis on a road to nowhere" and a great place where you can "listen" to the forest and the lakes.

One resident told Caplan that a guest had said to her, "you're living my dream".

Enthusiastic and spontaneous ideas and slogans also sprang out from the gathered audience. "We're outdoorable", "Slow down and enjoy Haliburton", and "Seasonally adjusted" were just some of the suggestions. The biggest laugh of the night came from Christopher Greaves' suggestion of "The Haliburton Highlands - Muskoka Light".

Foresters to focus on education, public relations

DEREK MALCOLM

Education was an important topic at the Haliburton Highlands Sustainable Forestry Association's annual general meeting May 30 at the Haliburton Curling Club, where topics included the county's new tree cutting by-law, a code of ethics and practices, and the role of a possible public relations person.

Though the two-hour meeting covered a wide range of in-depth topics, educating people on how to manage Haliburton's private forests kept cropping up.

Association members voiced their opinions on educating loggers, land owners and younger generations on proper logging practices such as tree marking, how to determine basal area, and assessing tree defects.

"Education is something we really want (Doug Thain, the county's forestry by-law officer) to emphasize," said Steve Wilkins, stewardship co-ordinator for Bancroft and Haliburton Highlands Stewardship Council.

Wilkins also noted there are workshops available at the Leslie M. Frost Centre such as the Management Options for Your Woodlot course on Friday, September 15.

Seminar promotes prevention of heart disease and diabetes

THERE ARE THINGS WE CAN DO to lessen the risk of getting diabetes and heart disease and some of those preventative measures will be discussed at a free education seminar at the Haliburton Hospital on June 22 from 2 to 4. Join pharmacist Paul Heffer, dietician Rosie Kadwell and Dorothy Macdonald of the Canadian Diabetes Association as they explore such things as diabetes and blood pressure, cholesterol control and advances in research. There will also be recipes and cookbooks, information booths, door prizes and refreshments.

HSSS student Kimberly Maguire has been awarded the Academic Excellence Entrance Scholarship by Sir Sandford Fleming College. The scholarship, which covers the full cost of tuition and ancillary fees for one academic year, is awarded to the top graduating student from each of high schools in the college's catchment area who is enrolled in a SSFC program. Kimberly plans to enter the legal assistant program in September.

On June 18, Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Victoria-Haliburton will host a Bigs and Littles Fishing Tournament at Rivera Park in Lindsay. There will be approximately 25 boats leaving the shore between 7 and 7:30 a.m.. Renowned Canadian wildlife sculptor Richard Loffler will conduct a hands-on sculpture course working with live animal subjects from July 2 to 8 at the Limberlost Wilderness Reserve near Algonquin Park. The program will also include a trip to the Algonquin Gallery and taking part in a half-day canoe trip. Artists who have previously taken the course say it's a invaluable way to learn how to capture the real essence of animals. For more information, call the Algonquin Academy of Wilderness and Wildlife Art, 1-888-696-4255 or visit the website at www.algonquinacademy.org.

On June 8, 1972, one of the most famous photographs appeared in newspapers around the world. The pain and misery on the face of Kim Phuc, a nine-year-old girl burned by napalm, helped fuel the protests against the Vietnam War. Over the past 28 years, Phuc, now living in Toronto, has made an amazing journey of forgiveness. Cambridge Street United Church in Lindsay would like to give everyone advanced - really advanced - notice that Phuc will be giving the Stinson Memorial Lecture on October 22 to help raise awareness of and funds for children victims of war.

The Kawartha Lakes Summer Playhouse is offering a summer theater arts training school at Sir Sandford Fleming College in Lindsay. Classes will range from drama, voice and movement. Passersby discover there was little they could do to help man killed in Hwy 118 accident

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Marion Markowski, who with his friend Robert Foster was first to chance upon the horrific accident near Carnarvon on the morning of June 3, says there was no way the driver of the car could have survived his head injuries.

The driver, who has not yet been identified, likely died on impact after hitting a moose on Hwy 118 because there weren't even any brake marks, Markowski says.

When Markowski and Foster saw the car on its roof in the ditch, there were already small flames coming from the 1988 BMW. He estimates the accident had occurred not a minute earlier.

The car doors were locked but they were able to smash in the windows to try to save him.

"I grabbed him but it was just a dead body," says Markowski.

After a few minutes, the flames were so intense they had to step away from the burning car without being able to extricate the driver.

"We did everything we could, believe me we tried," says Markowski, who owns Rachel's Bakery in Haliburton and Minden.

Once they realized they couldn't help the driver, Markowski and Foster helped control traffic until the police and fire department arrived.

HHHS gets additional $240,000 in permanent funding

The Ontario government is increasing permanent hospital funding by $435-million to support high quality patient care during the ongoing expansion and redevelopment of hospitals across the province, MPP Chris Hodgson announced on behalf of Health and Long Term Care Minister Elizabeth Witmer.

"His announcement means an additional $240,189 in permanent funding for the Haliburton Highlands Health Services," Hodgson said. "The funding will support front line patient services, including nursing care and enhance priority programs like cardiac care, emergency services and dialysis."

The $435-million increase includes $168-million in new funding for patient care across the province. In addition, $267-million will be converted from one-time to permanent annual funding. The increase brings provincial hospital funding to $7.6-billion so far this fiscal year.

"Modern hospitals are a fundamental part of our government's plan to reform and improve health care for the people of Ontario," said Witmer. "With increased permanent funding for patient care and our billion dollar investment in building new and expanded hospitals we are creating a state-of-the-art hospital system to meet the needs of our growing and aging population."

Spring wells considered "unprotected sites"

received a verbal confirmation from their inspector that the health unit will discontinue the service of testing at the spring.

"If the health unit doesn't have the resources to provide adequate testing then the municipality sure doesn't."

While Bain cannot anticipate what Stanhope council will decide, he is hopeful that they will erect warning signs similar to Dysart's since it would be difficult to close the spring.

"We really can't close the source off; it's run there for a hundred years."

Speaking late last week with The Echo, Dr. Alex Hukowich, the health unit's medical officer of health, said springs can easily become contaminated and are hard to monitor.

"The difficulty with springs are they are open unprotected sites and an untreated source of water," said Hukowich.

Eugene Raymo, environmental officer for the Ministry of the Environment, agrees that springs present serious difficulties when it comes to providing safe drinking water.

"Everybody assumes that spring water is pure, but a well is constructed to our standards. A spring is not constructed at all, or it doesn't have to meet any kind of standards. So springs don't even fall under our well legislation. My advice is if you don't know what you're drinking, don't drink it."

Hukowich points out that even increased testing cannot ensure the safety of the water.

"I don't think anyone can do anything in terms of really providing people with the same kind of level of assurance and safety as you would with a municipal water supply because there you have regular testing plus you have treatment, and it's the treatment that provides the level of safety, not the testing. Springs, because they're untreated and they're unprotected, are just inherently dangerous."

While there are no requirements for the testing of springs, the health unit has been testing Dover Spring every three weeks but Hukowich warns that it is not an assurance of safety.

"I don't want people to think 'the Health Unit is monitoring the drinking water source so it's safe,' because it's not safe."

He also stresses that even with regular spring testing if something does go wrong with the supply it won't be known until after the test results come back, which could be a significant amount of time, "which is a little late for people who have become sick".

Dysart Reeve Murray Fearrey agrees that in order to maintain the safety of the water it needs to be tested every day, but he says that unfortunately Dysart simply doesn't have the resources to do so.

He says council will search for a system so testing will be done as often as possible and in the meantime he implores people to boil the water for at least five minutes. Fearrey is also recommending that Dysart contact a hydrogeologist to test the source of Dover Spring.

If something does go wrong with the spring Hukowich places the responsibility squarely on the municipality's shoulders.

"If the municipality owns the land and they allow people to make use of the water then they are responsible," he says. "If people are going there to collect it then I guess in the end if something goes wrong then they could try and hold the owner responsible."

Some members of council say the health unit is just walking away from any responsibility when it comes to safe drinking water after the Walkerton incident. They ask why the health unit would even test the water previously if springs were "inherently dangerous water supplies".

Health unit receiving water test results but has no way to contact well owners

The Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit has issued a reminder that members of the public submitting water samples for testing are responsible for following up their results.

Currently, residents submitting a water sample can either send a stamp with the sample to have the results mailed to their home or pick up the results from the provincial lab.

The reminder was issued after the province this week began sending lab results to the Health Unit. In two days last week, the HKPR District Health Unit has received hundreds of test results, many of which show varying levels of contamination.

These reports have been sent with no consultation on the part of the Health Unit, says Medical officer of Health, Dr. Alex Hukowich, and do not include enough information for the Health Unit to contact residents whose water tests indicate contamination.

"Of the hundreds of reports we have received in the past two days, many clearly show some level of contamination in the water," says Dr. Hukowich. "What is disturbing to us is that we have been given very little information about these tests, where this water came from or how to contact the person who submitted the sample so they can be alerted to the problem."

This change in procedure makes it more important than ever that residents continue to personally follow-up their water test results, either by getting something in the mail or picking up the results directly from the lab, says Dr. Hukowich. If tests show any abnormalities, residents can continue to contact the Health Unit for assistance in interpreting the results and suggestions on what can be done to clear the contamination.

Dr. Hukowich also warns that residents should not consider water testing a substitute for a medical evaluation, but should see a doctor if they are ill with diarrhea or vomiting.

"Water testing should be used only as a means of ensuring the on-going safety of water, or as a way to gauge whether work has corrected a problem with the water," he says. "Water testing must not be used as a substitute for fixing a faulty system."

Medical officer of health outlines municipality's responsibility

The following is an excerpt of a letter dated June 9 from the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit to Dysart et al.

"Springs are an inherently unsafe drinking water source in that they are both unprotected and untreated. While the Health Unit has periodically checked some of these springs, it is not possible to check such supplies on a frequent enough basis to ensure their continuing safety. The responsibility for such supplies rests with the owner. Should you be aware of any such springs on municipal property, I would strongly recommend that you either attempt to close the supply, prevent public access or permanently sign the area in a way to advise the public that they should not consider the water safe unless boiled or otherwise disinfected. While I would not recommend that the municipality continue to offer such sources as drinking water supplies to the public, should you choose to do so, it is your responsibility to ensure some method of ongoing, regular and frequent monitoring."

Anson, Hindon and Minden council

Angry ratepayers express concern over water meters and Blairhampton Road

ERIK MARTENSSON

Staff Reporter

The municipal office parking lot was chock-full, as were the seats at Anson, Hindon and Minden's regular council meeting on Thursday. They were full of upset and concerned people who came with questions for council on many issues which overshadowed council's 2000 budget announcement.

Water Meters

"The cost of water is not automatically going up," stressed Reeve Jeanne Anthon, speaking to a delegation from the Minden Business Association (MBA) and a large group of supporters. The MBA was raising concerns over council's decision to install water meters in all of Minden's commercial businesses.

Council told the delegation that they were approached by seven businesses who requested the metering since they felt they were paying an excessive amount for their water and that metering would be the only fair way to divide the costs of the water.

The use of water meters is something that council had considered for a long time to facilitate equitable water costs, said Deputy Reeve Jerry Rome.

"Some businesses use a lot, some use a little."

The current water charge for businesses is $110 and is the same rate residential users pay.

While John Ayres of the MBA agreed that, "there are businesses in town certainly paying more than their share," he was concerned about trying to achieve equality.

Council assured the MBA that there will be safeguards so that commercial water users will not be subsidizing residential water users.

They also denied that the meters are simply a new revenue stream or tax grab and noted that eventually all buildings in Minden will have to be metered.

The municipality is responsible for the purchase of the meters and will reimburse clients up to $100 for the meter's installation. The price on installation is expected to be about $35 per hour and it is estimated that it will take two to three hours. Council did note that they will come across instances that are not typical and the business will have to cover costs over $100. The total cost of the meters was more than $30,000 and was in the 1999 budget.

After installation, the meters will then be assessed for one year so council will be able to determine an equitable charge for the water.

Council doesn't yet know the formula it will use to determine the cost to businesses nor how much it will cost to run and monitor the meters since that will be determined during the one-year assessment period.

"That way we know what are the costs and hope to arrive at a fair charge," said Rome.

Ayres expects that water usage may go down. "When you don't have to pay for it, you waste it."

Council is confident they will be able run the system with its current staff and is hoping the meters will be up and running January 1, 2001.

Blairhampton Road

A delegation of residents who use Blairhampton Road arrived at council to show their disapproval of the current maintenance of the road.

"Some businesses use a lot (of water), some use a little... We hope to arrive at a fair cost" nance of the road. They believe the road is not being maintained properly and is causing damage to their cars as well as making the road dangerous.

Deputy-reeve JERRY ROME

"The more it gets patched the worse it gets," said area resident David Lamb. "What are you going to do about it?" he asked council.

Roads Superintendent Clayton Cameron informed council and the delegation that the road is scheduled for a full resurfacing in 2001 but in the meantime the road will continue to be patched as it is currently. The estimated cost for resurfacing the road is about $150,000 and council said it unfortunately doesn't fit into this year's budget.

Dave Neville, an OPP officer, suggested that speed on the road should be reduced in the meantime.

"Probably make life a little easier if you could post a 50 km limit on that road."

Otherwise, he warned that, "you're going to get a lot of people in the ditch."

Neville also suggested axle restrictions and a yellow centre line be placed on the road.

Reeve Jeanne assured the delegation that council is "not trying to walk away from it."

She pointed out that the present council cannot hold the new amalgamated municipality to any present agreements but suggested that those who are upset with the quality of the road to put something in writing for the roads committee of the Transition Board so they can review the situation.

Newcastle Street

The municipality will erect a "Watch for children" sign on both ends of Newcastle Street in response to the concerns of a delegation of residents from the area. The residents were concerned about the safety of pedestrians and the excessive noise caused by the large number of trucks using the street

Budget

Reeve Anthon announced that the municipal portion of taxes will stay the same as in 1999.

Some other highlights of the 2000 budget include:

- added policing costs in excess of $80,000
- an additional expense of $30,000 for the application of calcium chloride as a dust suppressant instead of Dombind
- reconstruction of Main Street from the hospital to the fruit market

- resurfacing of Bethel Road
- further expansions at the Agnes Jamieson Gallery
- acquisition of land adjacent to the municipal offices which provides parking for the area.
- in excess of $150,000 for the costs anticipated in preparation for the amalgamation with Snowdon and Lutterworth.

False Alarms

Council discussed a draft bylaw that would see a charge being applied to property owners for false alarms. The fee would be $200 per for all false alarms after the third offense.

"We're not trying to make money but trying to curtail the amount of false alarms," said Rome pointing to the large number of false alarms that pull volunteers away from their jobs and livelihood and often are at cottages that are hard to find.

Transition Board

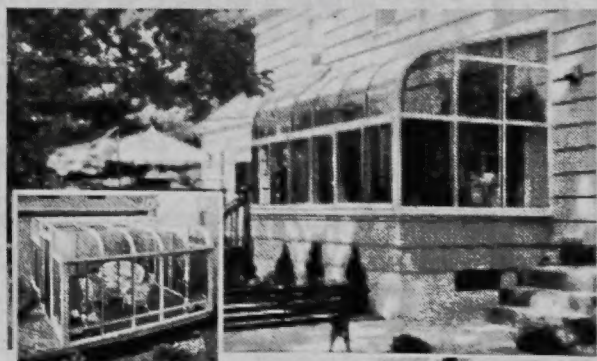

Council reviewed recommendations of the Protection to Persons Committee of the SLAHM Transition Board for the amalgamated costs of municipal building permit fees. Council felt that many of the recommended fees were far too high and should be lowered especially since many had been updated as recently as six months ago.

A second bridge

A resident has offered to make the municipality the beneficiary of his life insurance in order to construct a second bridge across the Gull River. While council agreed that another bridge would be advantageous to the community the cost would be substantial and likely exceed several million dollars.

Better packaging would make more people choose the Highlands: consultant

Many in the audience also voiced their concerns over too much development. While most agreed that jobs, especially in the shoulder seasons, are very important, they desperately want to maintain the natural beauty of the county.

"We do want employment," said Wendy Ladurantaye, while adding, "we want it to stay the same."

Dysart et al Councillor Al Ferguson said that he would like the brand to portray "that laid back image" but he definitely doesn't want to turn into "another Muskoka".

Caplan stressed that Haliburton has a great opportunity to attract a large number of visitors into the county. He talked about the community being like a "product on a supermarket shelf" which needs effective packaging in order to trigger a purchasing decision.

New marketing supplements such as 12-page magazine inserts and CD ROMs are strategies that at a low price point can increase visibility nationally and internationally.

That visibility is one thing that Haliburton really needs to work on, said Caplan.

Jokingly someone yelled out that Haliburton's slogan right now is "Where the heck is it" to illustrate his point.

Caplan is also confident that Haliburton can develop economically in the near future.

"Economic development is rolling northwards, eastwards, and westwards. We're going to see an economic expansion."

He pointed out that with the new economy people don't have to live and work in large cities because they can reach out to the world through today's communication technologies. The key is to attract these new businesses and retain them.

Caplan will be coming back to Haliburton in August with identity concepts for the chamber of commerce and for public meetings to garner more local community input.

He is striving for a campaign that creates "a fantasy in your mind" and has "a cohesion to appearance" but he is careful to point out that it is built over time and can't be done overnight.

"My goal is to create a design that I hope will be appealing, successful, and useful."

Glamorgan appoints replacement councillor

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

When Elva Bates stepped down as reeve of Glamorgan, and deputy-reeve Chuck Viner was appointed to take her place, council had expected to finish its term without appointing anyone else.

However, the Ministry of Municipal Affairs has said that's not possible.

Therefore, council has appointed Councillor Donna Graham to be deputy-reeve and a former councillor, Jean Heathcote, has been appointed to be the third councillor.

This leaves council with a full complement of members.

Municipal elections are in November, when voters will cast their ballots for the new municipality of Bicroft, Cardiff, Glamorgan and Monmouth.

While Wendal Sedgwick, at left, says that after generations of his family practised sustainable forestry, "why now should somebody tell us what we can and can't do?", Steve Wilkins of the Stewardship Council says "there are very few Sedgwicks around and a lot of butchers."

Some foresters don't see need for rules; others say rules put an end to bad practices of the past

Tree Cutting By-Law

The by-law, still in a draft form, was met with some concern from members who feel enforcement may have been a bit "too stringent," and that it interferes with trusted ways logging has been done for decades.

"We've been doing selective cutting in our bush for a century," said farmer and forest owner Wendell Sedgwick. "Why now should somebody tell us what we can and can't do?"

Sedgwick was passionate when he continued to mention that his father left him a "good bush" and that he was going to leave his family a good bush. "I know what needs to be cut and what doesn't."

Although Sedgwick commanded a great deal of respect from the members, Wilkins' point was well taken that the by-law is "for the people who aren't doing things for the county as a whole."

"There are very few Sedgwicks around and a lot of butchers," Wilkins said.

There was a positive feeling all around as members spoke of going above the current standards and working with the by-law officer to make the logging industry in Haliburton vibrant and recover from the "irresponsible practices of the past," said Peter Schleifenbaum.

Comment sheets were handed out encouraging members to document their concerns about the by-law. Suggestions were made that it be rounded out to make it easier for everybody, and that it be given a more positive spin in the wording without changing the tree act itself.

The creation of the association, having grown to 43 members and rising, was integral in putting foresters in a position to have input and change the by-law.

Code of Ethics/Practices

Members agreed people should be trained to understand and follow the code of practices which covers topics such as establishing and marking all property lines, not logging when conditions are too wet, leaving a site in a better state than it was before, and getting proper permission for land and road use.

The code of ethics covers more general industry standards such as following the code of practices, using good public relations, and educating members and the community to use the highest forestry practices and management available.

Both codes are still in the draft phase and members were encouraged to suggest any changes.

PR Person

A proposal to hire a public relations person for the HHSFA has been headed up by association member Greg Brown. The association was given $5,000 from HRDC to do a study on what the position would entail. It was determined that the successful applicant would be responsible for increasing the public image of the forestry industry while emphasizing growth in a sustainable way.

But that's just the beginning.

The individual would have to be an experienced forester, as the position also requires him/her to basically run the association, the office, and carry out silvicultural prescriptions (a plan on how to log a certain area of land and which trees to cut and marked).

The full order position for the PR person would cost around $50,000 per year, says Pat Morisson, who added that the association was looking for funding from sources such as the Trillium Foundation.

The PR person would also implement a new data base providing information of blockable lands for harvesting. The information will include colour-coded maps providing information on types of wood available on private lands.

Funding to hire this person is still required but Brown is looking into proposal options.

The next meeting for the HHSFA is June 13 at the MNR building in Minden.

Biding our time

A couple of Saturdays ago, two racing boats came to Head Lake. Brightly coloured, oddly shaped, they garnered a few curious looks and no doubt, stirred dreams of James Bond adventure in the mind of any adolescent boy who passed by.

And then the boats went in the water. Soon, any curiosity was quelled by the drone of the engines as one at a time, the boats roared back and forth across the lake. Drone is putting it mildly; roar is the more appropriate word to describe the noise they made.

Of course, speed racing in boats, in cars, on motorcycles is vastly popular, and with good reason. It has that enticing mix of danger and abandon, of taking life to its extremes just to see how far you can go. But race boats on Head Lake? Unh unh. It just didn't work. In fact, the boats were an antithesis of why people love the Highlands.

martha perkins

Isn't that always the way – to use the things we're not to try to describe what we are. The Highlands isn't speed-boats. So what are we? If Canadians are "not Americans", then Haliburton is "not Muskoka." Or in other words, Haliburton is to Muskoka what Canada is to the United States: the "nicer", more laid back version. Great. Try boiling that down to a catchy phrase with which to lure people to our land of lakes and forests.

Thursday night's meeting about coming up with a brand image for the Highlands was illustrative of the trouble we have describing ourselves. It's far easier for us to say what we're not than to come up with a few brilliantly pithy comments about what we are. Maybe it's because we have perfected that Canadian introspection, that ability – which, if American movies are anything to go by, isn't a trait shared by our southern neighbours – to stand outside ourselves to take a detached look at our actions and thoughts. We don't take ourselves too seriously.

A recent profile in The Toronto Star said we're "down to earth", which some people didn't take as a compliment, wanting, perhaps, to be as sexy as Muskoka with its grand cottages and allure of wealth. Who wants to be a Mary Tyler Moore when you can be a Marilyn Munroe?

But just as we can't put ourselves down as being a poorer copy of Muskoka, we want to be honest about what we have to offer. Sure there are beautiful places around the world, places with majestic mountains, vast seas reaching out to distant horizons, breath-taking canyons and serene silences. But do you know what? Haliburton's beauty is easier to live with. It's not as overwhelming as, let's say, the Rockies or the Alps, where human achievements pale in comparison to God's. Our beauty is on that human scale, making it a more comfortable fit. We can live with the Highlands' beauty and still feel that in the grand scheme of things, our lives have some value, too.

Haliburton attracts Haliburton types. The people with speed boats don't stay long. Just as most people who live or cottage or vacation here didn't like the sound of those race boats, the people in the race boats probably didn't like having such a small playground. Sometimes it takes longer to discover such truths, which is why we Highlanders must be patient. Our time in the sun is coming, our economy will one day be less dependent on whether the sun is shining on any given weekend, just you wait and see.

Creating a theatre for all

The Northern Lights Pavilion – one year old this week. This time last year, a gala week showcased our county's multitude of talents in a new state-of-the-art auditorium. Most who went and were entertained were thrilled, even amazed, both with the presentation and the place.

The Pavilion itself one year later still delights its spectators and impresses its performers. It will always be a monument to the genius of David Pequegnat, former professor and stage craft professional. Subsequent difficulties must not dim our debt to him. His many contacts with stage designers throughout Canada and his skill and tenacity combined to shape that glorious space. A stage just a few inches high so that heavy sets and grand pianos could be easily put into place with low ramps, a low stage that then permitted the steep slope (called the "rake") enabling every seat to have a sight line to the stage – these are but a couple of the most obvious of David's ideas that make our theatre the envy of other venues.

At our recent concert series evening I overheard a woman say that "in our city 10 years later we are still making changes attempting to bring our much more elaborate theatre close to what you already have here." Although the ideas came from David, credit must also be given to the designated architect who accepted the model and incorporated it into the already assigned space, the former school gym.

The theatre space itself may be the most memorable aspect of a first year but it enveloped many fine moments. The high school's production of Grease, the Messiah Choir's "Gilbert and Sullivan" evening, the Haliburton Little Theatre production of Love Letters, the Concert Series Richard Raymond, pianist, are some the highs of this first year.

Are there some lows? Perhaps, depending upon one's perspective. The lows are those nights when the auditorium remained dark while small local productions had to perform in other much inferior space because the rental of the Northern Lights Pavilion was too great.

One's perspective depends upon one's definition of a community theatre. Does community theatre mean a theatre that will provide stellar entertainment for the entire community or does it mean that its stage is accessible to all the performing arts within the area, depending of course upon availability?

That is a very tricky question especially when one acknowledges two defining opposing forces. On one hand we have this community theatre which gave our region so much but in doing so demolished the only raised stage in town. No other venue has decent staging space with even reasonable sight lines. That gym auditorium with the raised stage and hard seats about which we all complained bitterly is no more. On the other hand, intentionally or not, just by the community's acquiescence we have created a very expensive theatre venue and its costs must be covered.

Not only must a basic rental fee covering the upkeep of the space as well as maintenance personal be assigned, but also use of our glorious piano entails a piano tuner, movers, and general upkeep. Individual liability insurance has to be included. A professional sound and lighting technician must be present any time those features are required. These costs must be borne entirely by the fees charged. As well the contract that the Trillium-Lakelands School Board insisted upon when this space was given to our community in order for us to build our great theatre states all school sponsored theatrical productions pay no fees.

When reviewing my notes for this retrospective, I was most reminded of the time our family decided to buy horses. Everyone told us that the cost of horses would be nothing compared to the upkeep. Twenty years later we could fervently agree how right they were but in this community were there any voices raised when all these plums – sound, lights, piano, etc – were offered to warn that the initial cost was only the beginning and if such voices were raised, were they given credence by the decision makers? These are but idle questions after the fact for we cannot escape the horns of our dilemma – a costly superb stage but the only venue in town.

Many ideas are needed to bring all facets of the community together to create a true community theatre in both senses of the word. I have only one, an endowment fund that would subsidize local groups who could not otherwise meet the costs.

Enough is enough

Well you didn't really think I would let this issue go without commenting on it, did you? I'm talking about, as are a lot of people, the latest effort by the Ontario government to undermine teachers and the public school system by trying to pass Bill 74.

This Bill, for those who haven't heard, is designed to force teachers to take part in extra-curricular activities, any time of the day or night, school day or not, on or off school property. It is utterly ridiculous and we, as concerned parents, grandparents and citizens, have to tell Mr. Harris and his colleagues that enough is enough.

For starters, I'm really getting tired of teacher bashing and this is not just an effort to get my kids good marks. I hear so many people who talk about teachers as though they are over-paid, underworked fat cats who earn way too much money. I've said it before but I think it bears repeating, anyone who says this hasn't been in a classroom in a long, long time, especially Mr. Harris. We all know he didn't last long in his classroom.

Teachers are now expected to be social workers, parental units, nurses, speech therapist, buddies, etc, to 25-30 kids, as well as trying to get in all of the ever-changing curriculum and write detailed report cards three times a year. Yes, they are well-paid for what they do. For doing all of that, I'd want to be too thank you very much.

Those who have become teachers did so because they had a love of learning and children but also for some security. They went to university, they trained, they put in the hours, so why shouldn't they be allowed to earn a living and have health benefits and pension plans? Isn't that what most people do?

As for that old song of the two months off in the summer, that is really old and tired. That is the way the school calendar is set up. The kids need the time off and so do the teachers. Enough already. We're all quite happy to send the kids back at the end of August when the time come because usually we've run out of things to do, patience and we need a break from them after a mere two months and usually only a couple of kids. Doesn't it seem reasonable that teachers are entitled to some refresher time after dealing with about 30 kids from September to June? Aren't they entitled to a life as well? I don't see anybody else being forced to volunteer on their summer vacations. Seems to me politicians also get their share of extended holidays.

Teachers will be expected to be on call 365 days of the year, 24 hours a day, at any location to offer extra-curricular, or the new phrase, co-instructional activities to our children. I stress the "our children" part of the sentence. Teachers can only contribute so much to our kids' education. We have a responsibility as parents and caregivers to do our share as well. We can't keep piling on more and more duties to our schools because we either don't have the time ourselves or simply don't feel like it, expect them to keep up and then get mad and throw insults and blame when they can't.

Everyone has a breaking point and I think our public education system has reached it. We trust our children to these people everyday not because they are a babysitting service but because I'd like to think that people still value the education that our schools give. Our children would be far better off if we as parents partnered with out schools to help them rather than constantly berate them for a so-called poor job.

People usually volunteer to do something because they like to do it, they have a talent in an area, and they can help others. When they volunteer by choice, the product is so much better, as we can see by our local school successes in "Grease", track and field, cross-country skiing, web-page designing, chess club and the list goes on and on. People choose to join Rotary, Kiwanis, volunteer fire departments, CHACE, the library board, soccer leagues, choirs and so on, because they want to, because they think they can make a difference. Shouldn't teachers be able to choose their activities as well? As for those who say it is to get the teachers who don't do anything, I don't know very many who don't do anything and if they don't want to be there, is that going to supply a good activity? There are great teachers and not so great teachers just as there are both ends of the spectrum in all professions, be it car sales, doctors, mill workers or convenience store workers.

I am so distressed by this I am nearly sick. I read Bill 74 and I witness what is going on in our schools and I just want to cry. The system is being eroded and we have to stand up and say that this is not right. Our children are going to be the losers not the winners if this Bill is passed. There is more to teaching than just instructional time and curriculum, Mr. Harris. There is the joy of learning, the love of knowledge and respect for other human beings, things that you and your cabinet could stand a lesson in.

letters to the editor

Bill attacks teachers, rights

To the Editor:

It is impossible to read an issue of this newspaper without noticing all of the volunteer work being done by teachers with the youth of Haliburton County.

Did you see the production of Grease? Hundreds of volunteer hours went into it.

The girls' basketball coaches drove players to games at their own expense when they could not get bussing. The flute choir director drove students to their performance at the Orillia Opera House last week, and bought dinner for them. The track coaches were at the school at 5:30 am twice in the last month to take students to meets in Cobourg, arriving home after midnight and teaching the next day. This, after months of after-school practices. The OSAID teacher advisor took students to a four-day conference in Mississauga, driving her own car and giving up her weekend for them.

The list is virtually endless

Teachers give their heart and soul to after-school activities. Students have so much choice that it is difficult to fit in all of the extracurriculars available to them, choosing basketball or field hockey, football or soccer, drama or band.

The thanks is Bill 74.

It states that principals can demand that teachers perform "volunteer" extracurricular activities anywhere, 24 hours a day during the school year. If a teacher refuses, it is considered strike action and they can be fired.

This is nothing less than slavery. What purpose can possibly be served by a government having the power to dictate what anyone must do 24 hours a day, 10 months a year, anywhere on earth? The government would not even attempt to impose this on any other minority group.

Bill 74 has passed second reading, and it is the intention of this government to pass it into law as quickly as possible, with minimal public input (in Barrie and Ottawa only) before the public notices what is really happening.

In addition, this Bill gives Janet Ecker, the Minister of Education, the power to override decisions made by local school trustees. We are down to only ONE democratically elected trustee in Haliburton County and now even she will have no power. Instead of taking your voice to the education decision-making table, she will be imposing the will of the province on our local schools. If she doesn't, she can be fined and banned from running for public office for five years.

This Bill is not just another attack on teachers and school boards. It is an attack on the basic rights and freedoms of citizens in what is supposed to be a democratic society.

The True North is no longer free, no matter what your child will be told to sing each morning.

Minden considered one of top events among timberjacks and jills

On Saturday, this couple from Shipshaw, Quebec, each earned the most points after competing in several events, taking home as much of a sense of pride and accomplishment as prize money.

Another timbersport couple, Wally and Andrea Robarge of Naples, New York, met at the same college where Wally was studying forestry techniques. They joke that she soon realized that if they wanted to spend more time together, she'd better join him out in the field where he practised timbersports. Instead of just watching him, she began practising, too.

Today, when he returns home from work and she takes a break from raising their four sons, they head out to the barn and start chopping.

That dedication paid off Saturday in Minden when she tied for fourth overall and he came in fifth among the men.

Paul Eash says his day job as a jeweller doesn't help him stay in the top physical shape needed to wield an ax with the heft required in competition, "but being a jeweller helps me keep my tools in shape," he smiles.

Sixty-five people competed for $9,000 in cash and prizes, but it's not the money that brings them to Minden, organizer Ted Anthon says.

"There's a lot bigger money (at other events) but they consider Minden one of the top events," he said, in between his duties of thanking the many sponsors of the day to the crowd gathered on Minden's main street. "They like the professionalism of the set-up and the level of competition. You get a top quality competitor here."

You also get media attention. Most of the events were videoed by the Outdoor Life Network, which will broadcast a segment on Minden as part of its timber-sport coverage. It will air four times on July 14 and 21.

The following are the results from the 8th annual Timbersports in Minden.

Q & A

QUESTION:

My brakes sometimes squeak, is it time to change them?

ANSWER:

Some brake noise can be normal, but more often it means that something is wrong. If they grab, vibrate, or pull, or if the pedal feels unusually low or hard, you need to have the brakes and brake fluid levels checked.

Cardiff man fined for illegally keeping lake trout

Craig Partridge, 40, of Cardiff Township, was fined a total of $500 recently after pleading guilty to the catching and keeping of a number of lake trout that fell within a slot limit.

Court was told Partridge illegally kept lake trout from Miskwabi Lake that were 40 cm to 55 cm in length. Lake trout of this slot size are to be released live back into the lake.

The slot limit regulations are in place on a number of Haliburton County lakes as just one part of the "Haliburton Lake Trout Project" to rehabilitate and protect the provincially significant Haliburton strain of lake trout. These lake trout are a genetic strain that evolved in this area and the slot size regulation is an attempt to have spawning-sized fish released to allow them to repopulate the lake naturally.

The court also ordered Partridge's fishing licence to be suspended for a year and ordered his fishing equipment forfeited.

Partridge appeared before Justice of the Peace D. Jackson at the Ontario Court of Justice in Minden.

New Trillium Lakelands district school council seeks applications Parents from across Haliburton and Victoria Counties as well as Muskoka will have a forum to become a common voice on educational issues.

The new Trillium Lakelands District School Council will be inaugurated this September.

Last week, the Trillium Lakelands District School Board approved the process that will be used to choose the council's members.

"The council will be an excellent way to share ideas among people who might otherwise never meet," says Director of Education Evelyn Brown. "It will also give parents a direct communication link to the board to ensure their voices are heard."

Anyone interested in becoming a council member must fax a letter to the director by September 15, with each school choosing a potential member of the new council. By October 15, trustees will have met with the potential candidates from elementary schools in their area and chosen one member and one alternate.

The inaugural council meeting will be on November 15 in Minden.

Province starts planning four lanes of Hwy 35

The province is starting a planning and preliminary design study for the four-laning of Highway 35 from Highway 115 north to Highway 7 at Lindsay.

The study, scheduled to start in June, was announced by Haliburton-Victoria-Brock MPP Chris Hodgson.

"The government recognizes the vital importance of the Highway 35 corridor to Lindsay and the surrounding area," said Hodgson. "A safe and reliable highway system is essential to meet the needs of local residents, area businesses, and tourists."

The two-year study will include four rounds of public consultation and several public information centres where residents will be able to voice their concerns.

The Province said the timing of construction will hinge on property requirements, environmental approvals, the availability of funding as well as the length of the planning and design work.

The study is part of the $1-billion the government has committed to improve and expand Ontario's provincial highways in 2000-2001.

Top oncologist speaks at Access Centre meeting

Cancer bigger health risk than heart disease

PAUL FERGUSON

Staff Reporter

Almost everyone knows someone who has been affected by cancer. Whether it's a friend or a relative, whether it's lung cancer or breast cancer, it seems almost inevitable that people are going to come in contact with cancer in some form within their lifetime.

At last Monday's annual general meeting of the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge Access Centre, Dr. Richard Schabas, head of Preventative Oncology at Cancer Care Ontario, tried to convey a message during his speech that we have not done enough to bring the rate of cancer down.

He also made an astounding correlation between cancer and ischaemic heart disease.

His statistics showed that heart disease has been reduced dramatically over the past 30 years. Heart disease used to tower over all other causes of death and diseases in Ontario; now that has changed. The burden of disease has shifted, with cancer becoming much more prominent.

Schabas says that the risk of dying from heart disease has declined almost 60 percent between 1970 and 1995, whereas the risk of dying from cancer has remained the same.

"Cancer isn't getting worse, it's because it's not getting better while all the others, or most of the other diseases, heart disease being the most striking, have been getting better," says Schabas.

Society has not made the same kind of efforts to prevent cancer as it has with heart disease, he says, believing that our health system lacks the capacity to make strategic adjustments to bring the cancer rate down.

The bulk of Canada's population is baby boomers. Now that they are getting older and approaching retirement, there is starting to be an increase in the burden of cancer.

A startling trend has developed where there's a three percent annual increase of people are being diagnosed with cancer.

Between lung, breast, colorectal and prostate cancer, each of them will cause between 6200 and 7600 new cases every year. These account for about 60 percent of all new cancer cases in Ontario.

Lung cancer is by far the deadliest. It still has a 90 percent fatality rate, despite all the research. It also causes 6,000 deaths each year in Ontario, where colorectal, breast and prostate combined don't even match that number.

It's well known that smoking causes lung cancer. In fact, tobacco causes 30 percent of all fatal cancer cases in Canada.

The good news is there's been a dramatic decrease in adult men smoking in since the 1950s. In 1965, 50 percent of all men smoked regularly compared to 25 percent now. Schabas says this is for a couple reasons.

First, the landmark finding by the American Surgeon General linking smoking with lung cancer was, and still is, the best deterrent not to smoke.

Second, public education has become vital in the fight against lung cancer, not only to stop people from smoking, but more importantly, to stop people from starting to smoke.

The third reason why smoking has decreased is the restrictions on advertising. You no longer see commercials of women in bikinis surrounded by good looking men enjoying a cigarette and the good life. Our society is very impressionable, and can do with out those ads, he says.

Finally, Schabas thinks higher taxes on cigarettes is the most effective way to prevent people from smoking, especially youths.

Schabas mentioned during his presentation, with a big grin on his face, that the federal government is considering raising the taxes on cigarettes again.

The power of prevention was Schabas' last message of effective ways to fight cancer.

He compared it to stomach cancer. In the 1930s, stomach cancer was by far the biggest form of cancer. Researchers found out that a combination of better refrigeration, using fewer preservatives and better sanitation (chlorinated drinking water) has made stomach cancer pretty rare compared to the other forms of cancer.

Schabas believes that cancer screening is the key to helping reduce the rate of cancer. Right now the only effective screening is for breast, colorectal and cervical cancer.

Cervical cancer screening, which was introduced 50 years ago, has dropped the death rate has dropped in half. And now that we have been screening for breast cancer, it too is beginning to decline...

These statistics and facts may make people think cancer is getting worst. Well it isn't. Schabas just thinks that it isn't controlled. "We are simply holding the line against cancer and that's not good enough."

One step at a time for a good cause

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Although Crohn's and colitis disease affects thousands of Canadians, there still is not a cure for these forms of inflammatory bowel disease.

On June 25, Minden resident Cathy Arbour hopes other Highlanders will join her in trying to change that.

Arbour is organizing the first-ever Heel and Wheel-athon in Haliburton County to raise money for research into inflammatory bowel disease.

"It's a very worthwhile cause," she says. "We have to find a cure for it."

Arbour got ulcerative colitis 14 years ago. At first, it was more of a nuisance, but as it became more troublesome, she started to have to take potent medication and spent a lot of time visiting hospital emergency departments.

"Some years weren't that bad but some were really bad," she says.

When the medication began affecting her other organs, major surgery was the only option available.

"(The pelvic pouch procedure) is performed in two stages," she says. "The first step involves removing the large bowel or colon. The rectum is also removed, leaving only the anus and approximately one centimetre of the rectum."

"The surgeon then builds an internal pouch with your remnant intestines on the inside to use as a reservoir later. An ileostomy (external bag) was done at this time."

"The second stage of the surgery is done after the makeshift internal pouch has healed, approximately five months later. The ileostomy is removed and the small bowel is attached to the reservoir and sewn together. Unfortunately, I had a lot of complications including obstructions and infections."

"After about four months, I developed an incisional hernia affecting the entire abdomen. They re-opened the stomach and did a lot of extensive repairs. After approximately four months of recuperation, this happened again. Again they went back in sewing each layer of tissue and doing repairs. I then developed a seroma (large pocket of fluid in the abdomen) and the drainage tubes had to be reinserted for about four months."

Listening to her describe her life for the past two years, there's little wonder Arbour would like to help find a cure for Crohn's and colitis.

Because surgery, she notes, only helps her cope with the disease; it doesn't get rid of it.

"I'm starting to feel a lot better and I think the black cloud over my head has turned to a lighter shade of grey."

But apart from the physical pain and discomfort caused, Arbour says the disease can take over your life.

"This is a disease few people talk about but it is very debilitating," she says. "You get to the point where you won't go anywhere if you don't know where all the washrooms are located. You're afraid to wander too far. When people invite you to their home for a get together, you're constantly figuring out how many people will be and how many washrooms they have. You usually worry so much that you end up not going and eventually people stop asking."

"I have missed a lot of time with my children while they were growing up and our lives have revolved around my disease."

"It is very important to keep a good attitude and think positively. This is not always easy but having a supportive family like I do certainly helps. My two sons, Denis and Daryl, and my husband, Dan, have had a lot to endure over the past years and continue to be my strength. My husband has been my rock and my shoulder to cry on. My mother, Beverly Gilmore, has helped me so much over the past years and has become my best friend."

She also praises Dr. Steve Ferracuti of the Haliburton Family Medical Centre for being so knowledgeable about the disease and, as a result, saving her many trips to the city.

"It is nice to know in our small town that we have such excellent medical staff," she says. "The VON and Paramed services were also excellent."

Yet as much as she sometimes feels she's facing a big battle in her own little world, she was amazed when she went to Mount Sinai Hospital in Toronto to discover that an entire floor is dedicated to Crohn's and colitis patients. The hospital's registry of Crohn's and colitis patient has passed the 3,000-mark.

She encourages people to support the June 25 event by either participating in the 2.5-kilometre walk (or run or bike ride or rollerblade) or sponsoring someone who is. Sponsor forms are available by calling her at 286-3251 or Barb Perog at 286-4674 or they're available at various stores throughout the Highlands. Registration is at the Head Lake docks in Haliburton at 9 a.m., with the walk expected to start around 10 after a brief warm up. There will be a barbecue and lots of prizes.

Bike, run or walk

— there are more ways than one to participate in Fit for Heart

PAUL FERGUSON

Staff Reporter

The Heart and Stoke Foundation will be holding its annual Fit for Heart event on June 24 at Head Lake Park starting at 9 a.m. and going to noon.

Everyone is welcome, and you don't have to be in shape to participate.

Coordinator Lisa Box-Warburton wants to encourage everyone to come out and support the Heart and Stroke Foundation.

"We are going to be playing games and it's going to be a lot of fun, and anyone from five years on can do it," she says.

Participants will have the choice of biking, walking, jogging and stretching.

There will be refreshment breaks every half hour; guest speakers will talk about nutrition and the importance of stretching.

The proceeds will be going to the Heart and Stroke Foundation, where research is being done to help find cures for these diseases.

Pledge forms are available from Box-Warburton at the Body Rhythm Personal Training Studio on Highland Street in Haliburton (next to Teddy Time.) There will be prizes awarded to the people that raise the most amount of money.

PAUL FERGUSON/Echo

Fit for Heart organizer Lisa Box-Warburton says this Saturday's event is a fun way to raise money for the Heart and Stroke Foundation and promote an active lifestyle.

Teacher Stephanie Metzger and some of Stuart Baker Elementary School's top runners watch as their route across the east coast of Canada is marked on the map. British Columbia, here they come.

MARTHA PERKINS/Echo

Students run from St. John's to Haliburton

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Whew, talk about the energy of youth!

Students and staff at Stuart Baker Elementary School have just completed their run from St. John's, Newfoundland to Haliburton and they're already setting out for Northern Ontario as they make their way across the rest of Canada.

Granted, it's taken them since last September and they've never had to step a foot outside of the schoolyard.

During recesses, lunch hour and fitness classes, students, staff and even a few parents have been recording how far they've run. One lap around the yard earns them a popsicle stick, and 10 sticks represents one kilometre.

Teacher Stephanie Metzger collects these sticks and maps out how far they'd take the school if they were running, as the crow flies, from coast to coast.

"Our millennium project is to run across Canada but it will take more than a year," says Principal Deb Wales, who's very impressed that the school's already completed a quarter of the journey. (Once the students hit the British Columbia coast, they're coming back east via the Yukon, Northwest Territories and Nunavut.

"We didn't think we'd get to Haliburton by the end of the school year and here we are (and there's almost a month of running left)," she says.

"It's pretty good for a bunch of little legs," Metzger says.

As well as celebrating the year 2000 and giving the children a rudimentary lesson on geography, the program is also encouraging physical activity as a part of daily living. All children in the school have taken part in the project.

HHSS student to be part of French cloning team

PAUL FERGUSON

Staff Reporter

Cloning, no matter if you like it or think it's ethically wrong, it is on the way, and undoubtedly will be a part of our lives in the future.

Most people won't have anything to do with it, besides seeing it on the news, but for HHSS student Kristi Bowskill-Bolin, it's another story.

After many students graduate from high school they take a year off and do some travelling to "find themselves". Whether it's joining a rock band, or doing some tree planting out West, this is supposed to be a time to get away from home to figure out what you want to do for the rest of your life.

In Bowskill-Bolin's case, she will be doing the travelling, but all her soul searching will be done from the confines of a genetics lab in Jouy-En-Josas, France.

She will be leaving for France in September to work under Dr. Xavier Vignon at the Institut National de la Recherche Agronomique, where she will be part of a team that clones cattle, rabbits and mice.

Bowskill-Bolin isn't comfortable with the idea of cloning, but thinks it can do some good.

"I personally don't approve of Kristi Bowskill-Bolin HHSS will work at a genetics lab in France where researchers are cloning cattle, rabbits and mice.

the cloning idea, even though that's what I am going to be doing. But it is the idea that you can take what we are made of and alter it to make us healthier... This will help us cure diseases like Cystic Fibrosis."

The compound employs about 900 people and is about the size of Haliburton.

She will be teamed up with eight biotechnologists working with such things as cell cultures.

This will be learning experience for Bowskill-Bolin, as almost everyone else there is older and working on some kind of post graduate degree.

She knows things may start off slowly, and fully expects some menial tasks at first such as cleaning cells, but as she get more comfortable she will get more responsibility. The only thing she is afraid of is having an accident.

"I am kind of nervous about making some mistake. I can just see it, a two-headed cow being born and it's my fault."

The opportunity to go to France came when she wrote to Dr. Keith Betteridge at the University of Guelph. Betteridge had done a two-year sabbatical at the institute and helped her get accepted.

She is no stranger to France, as she spent a year there going to school in Grade 9. Bowskill-Bolin loves the French atmosphere and can't say enough about their culture.

"I'm really looking forward to going back to France. I am addicted to their culture. I have gone back four times since Grade 9. Everything is put together well and it's really convenient. I like how you can turn every corner and there is a little town there."

She also knows many people in France and Switzerland. Her best friend is from Switzerland and she plans on visiting her often.

Bowskill-Bolin is only 17 and is finishing high school in June. She skipped Grade 9 after returning from France because the learning environment over there was much more advanced compared to here.

For example, she studied Hamlet in France Grade 9; you don't read it until Grade 12 here.

She expects to attend university once she returns, but "I think this is really going to be a great experience to find out if this is what I want to do and it gives you a hands on experience. A lot of people go into university thinking this is what I want to do and they change their major the next year."

Her first job will involve her going to check on the developing cells every four hours. She gets this task due to the fact that she will be staying in a residence close to the institute.

She is confident of her skills and thinks she will be prepared for the challenges that come her way because of the hands-on teaching methods of her science teacher Dave Mowat.

Bowskill-Bolin has already been accepted into four universities for genetics and sciences, but will have to re-apply once she returns next year if she still wants to go into the genetics field.

She is also considering going to school to study translation and interpretation of languages, if she changes her mind about science.

Advocate seeks better elderly care

Home Support guest speaker hopes his foundation will establish standards

ERIK MARTENSSON

Staff Reporter

The following are brief reports from the Haliburton County Home Support Services annual general meeting held last Wednesday.

Guest speaker

This year's guest speaker was David Globerman of the "Running to Daylight Foundation". Globerman founded the foundation in 1999 in response to the lack of proper care that he felt his elderly father received while in hospital shortly before his death. Globerman says he is determined to not allow the same thing to happen to someone else.

"We should never give up on providing the right treatment for our elderly."

The foundation is seeking to link elderly patients and their families with patient representatives to act as a type of liaison between them and the hospital or health care facility to ensure that they are provided with quality health care.

Globerman says that while the vast majority of health care professionals provide outstanding care he has heard one too many "horror stories".

He is afraid that some health care professionals have become a victim of "systematic desensitization" and rush to early judgements because they've seen the same situation many times and feel that patient is too old and not worth putting resources into.

"Nobody has the right to throw in the towel," says Globerman. "Quality care is not a privilege but a human right."

He hopes that his foundation will help families make educated choices so that their mothers and fathers will receive the highest and best care possible and are treated in a timely manner.

Globerman says that it is an especially important issue considering that "we are in the midst of a huge demographic change." Seniors now account for 1/8 of the population but that will jump to 1/6 in 12 to 15 years.

He is also hoping that with the help of the health care profession the foundation can establish clear and recognizable standards of care and have a system to monitor those standards.

As well, part of the foundations aspirations center around lobbying efforts and awareness campaigns.

"We have to be active, have to be vigilant, have to be politically active."

While Globerman expects that he will probably face some resistance from health care professionals he doesn't want to be adversarial and says he has seen good moral support from the medical community and believes his foundation can work.

"Everyone deserves a better chance than my father at his last hospital visit."

Election of Board of Directors

The following volunteers were elected for one year terms. Bob Mitchell, Garry Holland, Jerry Rome, Rob Eaton, Bill Harton, Helen Henderson, Ron Barr, and Ruth Still.

David Globerman is an advocate for treatment rights of the elderly

Outstanding Volunteer Awards

Two Home Services volunteers were honored for their dedication, compassion and empathy.

Mary Keats, of West Guilford, was honored for her devotion as Transportation Convenor for the organization for the last four years. Keats had 450 documented volunteer hours last year.

Mary-Lou Wesley, of Cardiff, was honored for her compassion in volunteering her time to transporting those in need to out-of-town hospitals and advocating for seniors in her area. Wesley had a documented 1331.5 hours of volunteer time last year.

Honorary Chair

Home Support's Honorary Chairman, Gord Monk, will be staying on with the organization.

"I'm honored to do it one more year. I have been very, very proud to serve as your chairman for the last year."

Home Support provides services to enable seniors and the physically challenged to remain independent in their own homes for a longer period. The organization depends on federal, provincial and municipal grants, as well as donations from local organizations, service clubs and interested individuals. Local fundraising also accounts for a portion of necessary funds.

Lakeside Baptist celebrates opening of expanded church

PAUL FERGUSON

Staff Reporter

Pastor Brian Plouffe and members of the Lakeside Baptist Church couldn't have asked for a better weather, or a better day to celebrate the official opening of their new church.

About 100 people, coming and going, gathered in Head Park on Saturday for a little sun bathing, free food and to listen to the contemporary music of the Lakeside Worship Team.

Plouffe enjoys and encourages the new, more hip music. He wants people to know that there is more to his church than hymns. He thinks this new music it is attracting young people back to the church.

Due to the growing numbers attending Lakeside Baptist Church they were forced to build a new church. Members collectively raised $265,000, which helped to pay for the $600,000 expansion.

"It was only a dream a couple years ago. It's wonderful to see this all come together," Pastor Plouffe said.

A Glory Trail made of balloons was formed leading people from the band shell back to the church. After the music was finished everyone walked the trail back to the church for the grand tour.

All these festivities took place, coincidentally on "March for Jesus" day, when it was expected that 15 million people worldwide would march to affirm their religious beliefs.

PAUL FERGUSON/Echo

Celebrating with song:

Saturday was a perfect day to listen to some gospel music and soak up the sunshine in Head Lake Park. Listeners enjoyed food, fellowship and later, a chance to tour the newly expanded Lakeside Baptist Church, which was completed through the generosity of parishioners who donated $265,000 toward the $600,000 cost of the expansion.

A Year in Guyana

opens the eyes – and heart – of young Highlander

NELIA RAPOSO

Staff Reporter

MOST HALIBURTON County residents don't think a toilet is a luxury but after her experience as a Youth Challenge International volunteer in a poor region of Guyana, Amanda McClenaghan does.

"The toilet inside the house kept clogging, so we had to build one outside," the Minden woman says after returning home from her two-and-a-half month stint with YCI, a non-profit organization that sends teams of people ages 18 to 25 to help less developed communities abroad.

When local Guyanese boys ages saw the terrible job the YCI people were doing while making their outdoor toilet they took over, says McClenaghan.

The end product was a hole in the ground with a wooden box over it to sit on. The box had a hole in the middle. It was surrounded by wooden poles which supported a tarp for privacy.

There were 13 people on her team who were using this toilet. They were given no more than two rolls of toilet paper a day. It wasn't until a week before she left that she experienced a porcelain toilet at a restaurant in Georgetown.

"You think you know what your getting into ...I have never been to a place like this. After a while you just become a part of it," McClenaghan, whose other travel experience includes going to Europe with family and friends, says.

When she wasn't in her hammock covered by a mosquito net — the only private space available — McClenaghan says she tutored the teachers and children in the village of Santa Rosa and Karburi.

"We were tutoring teachers who are younger than me," the 19-year-old says. "We think our education system is bad, they had 50 students each. Most of the teachers are about 22 or younger and they don't know what they are expected to teach."

Her favourite task was teaching the children to read. It didn't matter that once a week she had to walk three hours to the Karburi school; seeing the kids made it worth while.

"I didn't realize how much I love kids until I was surrounded by them. I think I'll be a teacher," McClenaghan says, adding she's planning to study general arts in university and then go on to teacher's college.

After teaching she would help community members build wells by digging holes and making bricks. She also helped local farmers in the fields.

"One woman teased me saying now she could tell her five-year-old daughter she's met someone who knows less about farming than her," McClenaghan says.

The way of life was new to her, but McClenaghan says she felt at home in Guyana because everyone was friendly. The local women would come over to where she was staying and show her, and the rest of the group, how to prepare Guyanese dishes.

For someone who went overseas not knowing how to cook and then be given basic ingredients with no microwave in sight, the help from the local women was a blessing, McClenaghan says.

However, it took a while to understand the Amerindian women's instructions. They speak English,

A year in the South American country taught HHS alumni Amanda McClenaghan many new skills, such as how to cut a coconut to drink its milk, above, and how to build everything a village might need with some of the simplest tools.

Simplest things in life become the most valued

McClenaghan says, but their thick accent and rapid way of speaking left her mentally exhausted.

Everything was different for McClenaghan. At home she showered everyday; in Guyana she was lucky if she took a bath once a week.

"Rain water is the best because it's clean. We could bath in the rivers but that water is stagnant and it has bits of dirt in it, so it wasn't doing much cleaning," McClenaghan says.

In the face of all this change, she says sometimes it was frustrating not to be able to call home. She had no access to telephones or the internet. The only place where she could use the telephone was in Georgetown.

"I was emotional when I'd get mail because I would realize how far from a source of communication I was. You want so badly to talk to your friends and you can't," McClenaghan says.

At the same time, she had the chance to call home a week into the trip, while they stopped in the city, and she chose not to.

"Guyana was my world. I didn't want to mess it up in my mind by talking to people in Canada," she says.

She finally spoke with her parents three days before her departure.

"I felt like, 'life's still the same there, meanwhile I've gone through all these experiences.' A lot of people were hurt because I didn't write them but it's not that easy," McClenaghan says.

The former student council president did manage to write to her best friend Jennifer Orpana who was studying in England.

"Having my friend in Guyana was crazy. It's a novelty to get British stamps to send something to Guyana," Orpana, 19, says.

McClenaghan first mentioned YCI to Orpana after reading an article in The Echo during their OAC year.

Amanda helps roof a building as part of her volunteer community work

"I told her, you're going to live in dirt: that's amazing. It takes a big person to do that," Orpana says. "I'm not exactly Jungle Book material but she was really excited. I was worried about the spiders and venomous snakes she might meet."

"She would write in her letters, 'there was a huge tarantula in our garbage,' like it was nothing. Or, how she would skip rope with the kids using dry vines. I thought it was cool because you always think of skipping ropes as those cheap plastic things from Zellers," Orpana says.

"Amanda's never been the norm. She's like, 'what can I do to be different?'" Orpana says. "She doesn't have things handed to her either. She works for whatever she wants."

And, work she did. McClenaghan had to raise $4,200 within a year to go to Guyana. She approached most of the businesses in the county and asked if they'd support her. "I was surprised with the amount of support I got from the community. In the winter, businesses are usually hard up for cash, yet they helped me."

She says that the experience taught her how generous people can be.

"It's nice when you take on an obscure project and everyone backs you up," McClenaghan says, noting her 17-year-old brother gave her one of her first donations and her father was a well of support.

"You can sit here and dream about what you'd like to do or you can do it," McClenaghan's father Ron says. "Whether it's a positive or negative experience doesn't matter."

Ron McClenaghan says he and his wife Marbeth were a little worried but they couldn't hold their determined daughter back. The fund-raising and orientation process took a year so by the time she left her parents were at relative ease.

"I believe no news is good news," Ron McClenaghan says about not hearing his daughter's voice for two months. However he concedes calling YCI's Toronto office and being told they hadn't heard from the team in Guyana either.

McClenaghan says the trip opened her eyes and made her resent how wasteful the average Canadian is.

"These people were getting by on small amounts. The western world has everything but if anything ever happens to the world we'll be the first to go — we need these people," McClenaghan says of the Guyanese people's resourcefulness.

Mark Kim, YCI's youth program manager says Guyana is financially the second poorest country in the western hemisphere but they are culturally rich.

"Anything Amanda did there helped. She was helping the Amerindian community who are treated like third class citizens in Guyana," Kim says. "Amanda came through the program with flying colours. I was very impressed. She has a solid head."

A life of happiness

Be happy with what you have, advises Betty Exon as she celebrates her 90th birthday

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

IN HER 90 YEARS, Betty Exon has always lived with the philosophy that you should be happy with what you have.

So it isn't surprising that she was all smiles as she spent her 90th birthday with some of the people who have made her most happiest, her family and friends.

"Accept things as they come, then you're not worried about money or grumbling," she says between greetings from the dozens of people who came to Extencicare on June 4 to extend their best wishes. "I was satisfied with what I had. I always had enough to live on and had family around me..."

"As long as your home life is happy, you're happy yourself."

This isn't to say life has not been without its sadness and challenges. She's lost two husbands, raised four daughters and helped her family put food on the table, all while working with her church and community to make the Highlands a better place to live for all.

Born on June 5, 1910 in Cambuslang, Scotland, young Elizabeth Low was sent to Canada by her father to accompany his mother back to Scotland after a visit to her other son. But those plans were dramatically changed when in Toronto, Elizabeth met Lesley Burk, a young man from Ingoldsby.

He was with the Canadian Air Force and by the time World War II broke out, the Burks had two young daughters, Joan (Irish), who was seven, and Beth (Harrison), who was three. The family was based in Calgary when he got the call to go overseas, so Mrs. Burk took the two girls back to Lochlin to be near Lesley's parents.

Sadly, after 11 and a half years with the Air Force without a mishap, Lesley had the unfortunate distinction of being the first Canadian ground crewman to be killed in WWII. He was riding out of London in the sidecar of a motorcycle, when the driver sideswiped a bus. Lesley was thrown from the sidecar and survived. However, medics gave him a tetanus shot, not knowing he was asthmatic and allergic to animals such as horses. A tetanus shot in those days was made with serum from horses' blood. He had a severe reaction and died, and his gravestone is in a quiet little cemetery in Sussex.

A few years later, his widow met George Exon who worked at the Standard Chemical Company in Donald. They married and had two daughters, Lois (Whittaker) and Nancy (Hutchinson.) He died in 1972.

In her work life, Mrs. Exon was at Hyland Crest and Birch Point Lodge for many years, and she was a stalwart of Lochlin United Church. She has a reputation as a dedicated knitter who was always making something for others.

Many of the people who have benefitted from her kindness were at Extencicare the day before her 90th birthday to extend thanks and congratulations in return. "Live your life to the best of your ability," she says. It's certainly worked for her.

THE HALIBURTON HOME AND VACATION SHOW

More than 120 exhibitors were busy showcasing their wares at the show, sponsored by the Haliburton Curling Club and held June 2 through 4 at the Haliburton arena. Jim Henwood (above left) sits in the PT Cruiser that some lucky person will win in the Rotary lottery while Glenn Urquhart and Dave Dummit (above right) man the Emmerson Lumber booth.

MIKE HARRIS THINKS HE'LL IMPROVE EDUCATION BY GIVING EACH TEACHER 25 MORE STUDENTS.

MIKE HARRIS HAS A LOT TO LEARN.

It's obvious that there's only one way teachers can find the time to teach, test, mark and help another class of 25 students. They'll have to spend less time with the other 120 or more students they're already teaching.

That means less time with your children. Less time for individual attention. Less time to help them understand difficult subjects. Less time to let you know how your children are doing.

So why is Mike Harris doing something as stupid as Bill 74? It's to further slash education spending and punish teachers who won't stop fighting for quality education. If each teacher teaches more students, there will be fewer teachers in your school.

Save your children's future!

Public outrage is the only thing that can stop the government from destroying your children's right to a quality public education.

Call your MPP and demand that Bill 74 be stopped.

A message from Trillium Lakelands Teachers and Educational Workers.

Creative program offers a week of learning and fun for girls age 11-14

A new program for girls between the ages of 11 and 14 will use outdoor adventure, group discussions and the arts to help them build self-esteem and confidence.

Quest is a week-long camp that will provide girls from across the county with the opportunity to talk about issues that are important to them, engage in creative and non-traditional forms of physical activity, build critical thinking skills, raise awareness of such things as body image, create strategies for dealing with these issues locally, identify roadblocks for young women in the community and create strategies to make their community a better place for young women, and create partnerships with women of all ages in the community.

A brochure on the project says, "for example, creative movement will be used to explore topics such as body image; journalling, and arts projects will be used to explore self-expression; theatre and role-playing will be used to explore issues such as gender stereotypes and discrimination; traditional East Indian dance and cooking will be used to enter into discussions about diversity; environmental issues will be explored through a two-day rock climbing/camping expedition at (Haliburton Forest); healthy risk taking and active living will be incorporated throughout the program through outings, a low ropes course, group building activities as well as the two-day rock climbing expedition; and the challenges facing women in non-traditional fields will be explored through discussions and local guests."

Program topics may include self-expression, activism, harassment, celebrating diversity, poverty, the environment and women and the media.

Quest's home base will be Haliburton Dance Arts in Haliburton.

Organized by Family Services of Haliburton County and funded by the Trillium Foundation, Quest will be offered at no cost to the participants. Because there are only 12 spaces available, participants will be chosen by lottery.

Applications are available at the Family Services office on Eastern Avenue in Haliburton or by calling 457-5345. The deadline for applications is extended until June 16.

Gooderham Elementary receives a kingly donation

DEREK MALCOLM

Staff Reporter

In three moves 12-year-old Ryan Carroll had my queen.

And as the Gooderham Elementary School Student pummeled me during the half hour chess match we had, a crowd of pint sized spectators gathered around us.

"Do you see it?" I heard one of them say. "He doesn't see it," she whispered to her friend. See what? As I frantically searched the board for the doom I so obviously didn't see, Ryan had me. Checkmate.

This embarrassing moment in my life was so thoughtfully brought to you by Gooderham teacher Blake Paton who, as a way to improve his students' math skills, decided to teach them how to play chess.

The students caught on quickly, and some excelled such as 12-year-old Ontario chess champion Kelly Dobson who will be travelling to Edmonton in June to compete in the Canadian National Chess Tournament.

It wasn't an easy start though. Lacking the funding to purchase chess boards for the school, Paton went out and bought a couple of magnetic traveling chess sets from V & S in Haliburton. Some chess sets were also constructed from felt with Velcro pieces to get the kids going.

It wasn't long before the CBC got wind of what was going on in Gooderham, and in May the CBC show The World This Weekend did a segment on Gooderham Elementary with Paton and 11-year-old student Devin Hunter being interviewed.

"What I wanted to do with my class first of all was to try to find a problem solving activity that didn't rely on the students' numeration abilities, their ability to add, subtract, multiply and divide," Paton said on the show. "So if you were weak with numeration, then you'd still have the ability to do well."

Listening to the CBC broadcast that day was architect Ross Kembar, who just happened to be the designer and manufacturer of a unique chess set. Selling them since the Seventies, Kembar graciously donated 60 sets to Gooderham Elementary last week.

"It's a result of Paton's patience and creativity that the kids have become interested in the game," Kembar said. "It's always worth encouraging young people."

Inspired by his father, an avid chess player, to design a contemporary chess set, Kembar produced and sold his sets that fit like a puzzle into a small plastic case. The wooden pieces were designed to reflect the direction in which they travel, such as the "L"-shaped knight. The power of each piece on the board is signified by its size, the king being the tallest.

Giving a brief description of the set, Kembar handed them out, one to each student at Gooderham Elementary, and the room was transformed into a tournament-like setting.

"We're really grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Kembar for coming by and supporting the chess program in the school," Paton said.

Check it out - Architect Ross Kembar keeps a close eye on the moves of these Gooderham Elementary students after donating 60 chess sets to the school.

Kinmount Organization honoured for commitment to preservation

The Kinmount Historical Society has earned a Heritage Preservation Award from the County of Peterborough as part of its millennium celebrations.

Since its inception 16 years ago, the Society has done much to preserve and celebrate the village's proud history.

Every year at the Kinmount Fair, it hosts demonstrations of such things as wireless radio and weaving, as well as organize fascinating displays, thus giving rise to the Kinmount Heritage Festival.

The Festival explores facets of the past, from settling patterns and homecraft to the railway. It has recreated 1860 storefronts, a turn-of-the-century home and a complete general store and apothecary shop.

Over the years, the Festival has been visited by more than 16,000 people.

Five years ago, the Kinmount Agricultural Society constructed two permanent and historic-like buildings, creatively designed by Society member Mark Brelsford, which were dedicated and named the Kinmount Heritage Complex. As home to the Festival and a growing permanent collection of artifacts and displays, which provide a popular diversion for fair goers.

Not yet a museum facility, the Heritage Complex is now available to school groups and seniors at times other than the fair weekend.

"Recognition for this outstanding heritage and historical project must go to past and present members of the Kinmount Pioneer Society, to the Kinmount Agriculture Society for its continued support and encouragement, to our very talented Kinmount artisans who so faithfully contribute and bring the Festival to life as a living, creative event, particularly to Mark and Roni Brelsford of Kinmount for their invaluable leadership, creativeness, support and hard work, and to our present Society presidents, Louise and Rudy Zandstra, who keep our interest high to continue this most worthy heritage project," says past president Bruce Fleury.

The award will be presented June 14 at 7 p.m. in the Norwood Town Hall.

Roving Reporters
286-2140

Last Thursday afternoon, there was no tea party but some of us tucked into some coffee and doughnuts while others enjoyed the entertainment of Jack and Ruth Worthington. The following afternoon, our happy hour was made happier with Cooper, Owens and Schell joining us and providing us with great music. We were glad to see so many turn out for this.

We really appreciate the many groups and individuals that come and play for us and it is good when we can show our appreciation by joining in.

The weekend was fairly quiet. Ann McAdam was at chapel to play the organ. We were very pleased to see her doing so well since her recent surgery.

Our week began with quiet time taking place on the first floor while baking took place on the second. On Tuesday, we welcomed Rev. Wicks to our morning chapel. The service was much enjoyed. Meanwhile, Prayer Friends took place for residents on the first floor. That afternoon, the craft group met for their weekly session. Other residents joined in "Mindjoggers". There is always something going on here.

Thursday, residents from the first floor boarded the Hyland Rover and headed out into the country and it was just great to see everything in full leaf. There were two new volunteers who joined the bus trip, Dolores and Jim Gunn. We much appreciate their help and look forward to having them with us again.

The Norland Hillbillies were here for our pub night and what an enjoyable time we had. Lots of great music.

We have other new volunteers we would like to tell you about. A young lady, Brenda Duncan, and her two lovely girls visit twice a week. Needless to say, we are really enjoying them. Then we have Barbara Valentine, sister Margaret Maines, and Elaine Davidson with her dog Gypsy. They also come and visit with us. It is wonderful to have these people giving of their time and we want to send our thanks.

We were saddened to hear of the death of Stuart Walkinshaw on June 7, in his 88th year. Our condolences to his family and friends.

Rev. Burgess has been unable to help out at our tea parties lately due to a problem with his foot. We hope this problem clears up and he is back joining us at tea party once again. We miss him.

We have a change in staffing. Janet Donnery, who has been on staff with the activity department, has returned to nursing staff here and Dana Lee, who was on nursing, is now with activity. Residents are going to miss Janet in activities but look forward to having Dana Lee with them.

We send a warm welcome to Beatrice Herlihey, a new resident. We hope she will enjoy being here with us.

On June 10, Winnie Barnum was the guest of honour at a special birthday party for her. Winnie is celebrating her 90th.

Speaking of birthdays, Edith Russell will be celebrating her 99th on June 21. Edith is quite the lady and still as sharp as ever when playing euchre. We hear she is tough to beat.

Did you know that June is Senior Citizens Month - time to celebrate seniors. Take the time to visit one, help out with a small chore, enjoy the company.

Coming up on June 16, the Council of Anson, Hindon and Minden is hosting a Seniors Appreciation Party. It will be held at the Minden Community Centre from 2 to 4 p.m. It is being held to celebrate Senior Citizens' contributions to the community and all seniors of the community are invited. We're sure quite a few of us will plan on attending.

Guess that's all the news for now. Goodbye, and we'll talk with you next week. Take care.

Cadets pass the test at annual inspection

Haliburton's Royal Canadian Army Cadet Corp #1129 held its 15th Annual Inspection at 1430 hours, May 28, 2000 in the local curling club. This Annual Inspection is the military equivalent to a graduation ceremony in the civilian world.

Mr. Albert Jobin, a local WWII veteran, was this year's Reviewing Officer. Mr. Jobin joined the Canadian Army in 1941. He was a member of the Ontario Tank Regiment which took part in the invasion of Sicily and Italy. As part of the British 48th Division they were also engaged in the fighting at Arnhem in Holland. Mr. Jobin has been a member of the Royal Canadian Legion for 53 years.

Billy Pickard accompanied Mr. Jobin as his Sgt-at-Arms. Mrs. Pickard is also a veteran of WWII service. She joined the Canadian Army in 1942 and served overseas in England, Holland and Belgium. She is also a long time Legion member.

Approximately 125 people were in attendance to observe the Cadets show off their hard-learned skills and knowledge. The audience included representatives from the local Legion branches, the Warden of Haliburton County, the Haliburton Highlands OPP Detachment Commander, Military staff from CFB Trenton, officers from neighbouring Cadet Corps and family and friends of Cadets.

Annual Inspection is also a time to recognize outstanding performances by Cadets during the training year. The following awards were presented by #1129's Commanding Officer, Capt. Dan Collings. For perfect attendance WO M Cook, Cpt N. Hawley, Pte R Mitchell, WO J Styles, Pte J. Pearce, Pte N Roberts, Cpl N Styles; best make recruit Cdt A Trueman, best female recruit Cdt N Scott, best Jr male NCO Cpl S Thornton, best Jr female NCO Cpl N Hawley, best Sr Male NCO Sgt M English, best Sr female NCO Sgt C Hie.

The commanding officer's award for leadership was presented to WO M Cook.

In addition, WO Cook was presented the Royal Canadian Legion Cadet Medal of Excellence by Haliburton Legion Branch President, Ed Pickard. This medal is awarded in recognition for individual endeavours in citizenship which meet or enhance the aims and objectives of the Canadian cadet movement.

Capt Collings also announced that the Corp's Regional Sergeant Major (RSM) Cadet Chief Warrant Officer (CWO) J McConnell will receive a $1,000 scholarship from the federal government's Youth Incentive Program. This inspection is CWO McConnell's last official function as a Cadet. He is finishing secondary school and moving to university in the fall. CWO McConnell has been a member of #1129 Cadet Corp since October of 1993.

Cadet G Anderson was presented an award and cheque of $50 by the Minden Branch of the Royal Canadian Legion as the Corp's Outstanding Cadet.

Local unit training has ended for #1129 this year. Many Cadets will be off to summer training courses at Canadian Military bases early in July. Regular unit training will resume in September. Haliburton Army Cadets train every Tuesday evening starting at 1830 hours at the Haliburton Legion hall. The program is open to youth, aged 12 to 18, and the Corp is always ready to welcome new recruits.

707 BIRTHS

Common name: NICHOLAS
ROWDEN. In care of soil preparation, propagation and planting are amateur gardeners, Derek and Sharon. Germination took place over nine months in the greenhouse that Sharon attended. She used the heated propagator unit, which she highly recommends. Hardening off was very tough, the gardeners soon found that this process couldn't be rushed. Finally it was time to move the seedling to the outdoor nursery.
Bloom time: June 7 at 5:47 a.m.
Plant care: Constant fertilizer that contains love, happiness, and a secure environment. Training and pruning is recommended. Plant problems: Known to have root rot.
Solution: Maintain strict hygiene and remove affected soil. Hybrid family: Keith and Deb, and Moe and Bernard Ogden.
